Hosannah Lulu Mwaungulu-Asabi is an Interior Designer and Architectural Technologist working across Wales and Scotland, specialising in the thoughtful transformation of existing buildings. As Founder of Hosannah's Limited, she delivers design-led work for private clients while also supporting structured projects for developers, contractors and professional teams with technically robust coordination and documentation.

Her work focuses on listed and conservation contexts, change of use, regeneration, remodelling and carefully considered extensions. Guided by a calm, purposeful process, she begins with deep listening and spatial analysis—then develops interventions that improve flow, light and function while respecting architectural character and building fabric.

With a strong technical foundation, Hosannah integrates construction detailing, services coordination, BIM-led workflows and regulatory awareness to ensure that creative intent is buildable and deliverable. Her work is informed by a strong understanding of CDM (health and safety) considerations and risk-aware design decisions, supporting responsible delivery from concept through to site.

Notable project experience includes involvement in 47 Parkfield Apartments within the Liverpool Conservation Area and the ongoing Esslemont & Mackintosh upper floor conversion. Her wider background includes roles with Sunflower Medical and Shine Catering Systems, as well as residential developer experience including work engaged by Jelson Homes. Earlier career experience includes kitchen design documentation aligned to major developer standards associated with Barratt Homes, Persimmon and Redrow to name a few.

Academically, she holds two BA (Hons) Interior, Architecture & Design, a PgC in Design Management, and an MSc in Construction Project Management, and is currently undertaking doctoral research in the Built Environment exploring flood-resilient residential design and sustainable material strategies.
